

Probiotics

The immune system, like the baseline of health itself, is only as strong as the weakest link in our body. That means, for example, that we can be taking all the Echinacea or colloidal silver or mangosteen juice in the world or getting a flu shot for that matter, but we won't have a strong immune system if:

- Our colon is filled with stagnant fecal matter which is slowly poisoning our body;
- We haven't replenished the beneficial bacteria in our intestinal tract, which provide up to 40% of our immune function;
- Our diet is filled with foods that have large indigestible proteins that form circulating immune complexes in our body that totally occupy our immune system by forcing it into a state of autoimmune disorder where it expends all of its resources attacking our body itself.
